Mairéad Duggan has a joint honours degree from UCC in English and Irish (Gaeilge) along with a Postgraduate Diploma in Journalism. She also holds two master's degrees, One in Library and Information Science (MLIS) from UCD and one in Children's Literature (MA) from St. Patrick's College Drumcondra (now DCU). Her most recent research focuses on picturebooks and the process of 'reading' images; a topic on which she has lectured and presented at various universities and conferences. Mairéad has worked as a school librarian on the JCSP Demonstration Library project in three different schools around the country. She has been working in Mount Carmel Secondary School in Dublin City Centre for almost ten years where she was a recipient of a School Librarian of the Year Honour List Award in 2017.
